I hope that the DOJ starts to take this case seriously again and assign punishment commensurate with the crime. A crime WAS committed here, but too many lawmakers own MS stock to do anything about the case. The proposed "settlement" was little more than a party-invitation to Bill Gates. A free market is one thing, criminal sales and licensing practices are another.

If you cannot split MS up, find an alternative punishment that will have some effect on the company. Like forcing them to release the source code under the BSD license.
